

IN PERSON · NINETY MINUTES

Tips for Presenting to Executives

Presenting to the C-suite and other executive audiences can intimidate even the most polished presenter. To engage busy executives, you need to get to the point quickly. To be persuasive, you need to understand your audience so you can demonstrate the benefits of your recommendations from your audience's point of view.

This speaker session shows you how prepare for your executive presentations. You learn how to address what is important to your audience, capture attention with an engaging opening, use transitions to create flow, and close effectively for results.

Who should attend

This speaker session is ideal for anyone who needs to make persuasive presentations to executives. We can support up to 100 participants.

You learn to

- Analyze your executive audience to understand their specific needs
- Demonstrate the benefits to your audience
- Address key questions and concerns
- Get to the point quickly to make the best use of time
- Show presentation polish with transitions that create flow
- Open and close your presentation effectively

What to expect

In this session, learn how to adapt and elevate your presentations for an executive audience. Apply your learning as you go, and leave with new techniques to effectively engage and persuade executive audiences in your future presentations.